SERC Library:
Topical Literature Search

Culturally Responsive Engagement with Families of Children with Disabilities
- Listening to the Perceptions and Experiences of Parents
December 2017

This resource guide, which is one of four on this topic, includes current research and other articles pulled from literature and the Library's educational database service for schools, programs, service providers and families to enhance understanding of multiple perspectives and the development of collaborative partnerships between education professionals and families from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds to better support the involvement and participation of parents in the education of their children with disabilities. It should be noted that it does not represent the full scope of resources and information available on this topic nor serve as an endorsement of any particular resource.

Introductory Article:

Listening to Parents’ Narratives: The Value of Authentic Experiences With Children With Disabilities and Their Families

Listening to Parents' Narratives: The Value of Authentic Experiences With Children With Disabilities and Their Families.
School Community Journal, 25(2), 221-242.

This article describes the impact on the practice and disposition of teacher candidates resulting from the implementation of a program called Families as Faculty (FAF), which was collaboratively designed and implemented by a university in the southwestern U.S. and the statewide Parent Training and Information Center to address this gap. The FAF program stressed the importance of parent involvement in school settings using a pedagogical approach in which teacher candidates visited the homes of parents who had children with disabilities, listened to parent narratives, and later reflected upon these visits. The FAF program provided teacher candidates authentic experiences with families and offered strategies for incorporating family engagement into teaching practices while placing parents and families in leadership roles. Such opportunities have the capacity to influence teacher candidates’ perceptions toward parent involvement and to increase the value they place on collaboration. (Campbell, Gilmore, & Cuskelly, 2003).

To learn more:
SERC Library Topical Literature Search: Culturally Responsive Engagement with Families of Children with Disabilities - Listening to the Perceptions and Experiences of Parents

December 2017

List of Sources:

Links to Information

Addressing the Unique Needs of Arab American Children with Disabilities

African American Families in the Special Education Process

An Analysis of Haitian Parents’ Perceptions of their Children with Disabilities

Cross-Cultural Issues in Parent-Professional Interactions: A Qualitative Study of Perceptions of Asian American Mothers of Children With Developmental Disabilities

Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Parents’ Perceptions of the IEP Process: A Review of Current Research

First-Generation, English-Speaking West Indian Families’ Understanding of Disability and Special Education

Individualized Education Programs (IEPs) and Barriers for Parents from Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Backgrounds

Listening and Learning from Mexican and Puerto Rican Single Mothers of Children with Disabilities

Perceptions of Disability and Special Education Among East Asian Parents: U.S. Immigrants and Non-Immigrants

The Voices of Latino Families Raising Children With Special Needs

Urban African American Families’ Perceptions of Cultural Sensitivity Within the Special Education System